I HAVE LIVED

I am now old enough {86) and experienced enough to realize that I can't begin to see, hear, feel, learn or understand the tiniest bit of what is available to me at this time in history.

I've been on 2 missionary crusades to Taiwan and Italy, Toured Israel at age 84 so I have seen some of the world, I know that I may never see more than that but feel it is enough. Worked at 6 different and interesting jobs. I can claim boldly that I have lived.

I've painted my toenails. bleached my hair, touched the bark of a 200 year old tree. I've shopped on line and eaten tomatoes from a garden, I've made friends and hopefully not many enemies. I've spilled perfectly good popcorn on the theater floor, and wondered why clouds are white and that I am fascinated with them.

I've given birth, buried a baby son, given birthday presents and watched and counted the birds sitting on a telephone pole. I have had breast cancer and diabetes. Ive made promises and kept them. I've had severe sunburns and a broken heart. I have helped carry bricks to built a cabin in the mountains and carried water to flush the toilet at a camp ground.

I have roller skated, ice skated and snow skied and danced and sang with groups. I have been to New York and watched the famous Rockettes dance. I attended the very first World Fair as a child. I read cereal boxes, written "wash me" across the back of a dusty car and skipped rocks in a lake. I have ridden a horse, boats, dirt bikes and water skied with one ski. I've tucked children into bed and returned to watch them sleep. I've smelled lilacs, gasoline and apple pie baking in the oven. I have accepted Jesus Christ as my Lord and Savior and love my family. Yes there is so much more to see and try but If I die tomorrow know that I have lived.
