At 92, she was still keeping her own house and has never missed cooking the family holiday dinners with love since 1946. She was known for her delicious food and baking, and her children were fortunate enough to have cooking lessons from her. She was an avid gardener and loved selling her veggies from her yard side stand almost as much as shopping Goodwill for bargains and eating with the "Colonel" (KFC's one piece chicken). Everyone who met her marveled at this tiny woman who could do just about anything. Spring Burial will take place in National Cemetery of the Alleghenies.
